About Dr. Harrison

Dr. Mark Harrison is a counsellor, clinical supervisor, and scholar with extensive experience spanning teaching, school counselling, university guidance, and careers counselling. Having held several positions of senior leadership at international schools, he brings a comprehensive understanding of educational environments and the developmental needs of young people navigating academic and personal transitions.

Dr. Harrison holds a Doctor of Education with a specialisation in developmental and educational psychology, complemented by master's degrees in counselling and educational management. This multidisciplinary foundation enables him to support clients across the lifespan with particular expertise in adolescent development, academic stress, career decision-making, and the psychological dimensions of learning and growth.

As a registered clinical supervisor accredited by the British Psychological Society at Level 3, Dr. Harrison provides supervision to counsellors and mental health professionals, fostering their clinical development and ensuring adherence to ethical best practices. His supervisory approach integrates theoretical rigour with practical wisdom, supporting practitioners in enhancing their therapeutic effectiveness and professional confidence.

Dr. Harrison has made significant contributions to the field through his scholarship, publishing extensively in international peer-reviewed journals and authoring two books on school counselling. He serves as Associate Editor of the Journal of Psychologists and Counsellors in Schools and holds editorial board positions with several other academic publications, shaping discourse and advancing knowledge in counselling and educational psychology.

His professional affiliations include registered membership with the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy, registered counsellor and clinical supervisor status with the Asian Professional Counselling and Psychology Association, and an honorary advisory role with APCPA. Dr. Harrison's combination of clinical expertise, academic leadership, and dedication to professional standards ensures the highest quality of care and supervision.
